Bridesmaids-The "Reciprocity" Idea Among Clubs.

The cotillion cannot be said to be favorite entertainment in this city, and yet for any one who is searching for novelty. The following describes a cotillion given in an Eastern city a short time ago and is one that might be copied in almost any place with good effect: "The cotillion is not often a vehicle of utilitarian theories, nor can the solitary exception be said to prove the rule. A charitably-inclined hostess has bethought herself of a scheme whereby she can entertain and also help along her pet charity. She prepared an assortment of socks, stockings, Tam O'Shanters. Brownie caps, worsted mufflers, woolen gloves, searfs and mittens, and knitted shawls and made them do duty as 'german' favors at her dance.

"Two large clothes baskets were placed at the door of the room where the dance was given, and the recipients were requested to discard their woolly favors and place them in the basket as they left the room. Next morning the articles were bundled up and swept off to make warm some deserving children and their moth-

The newest thing at fashionable functions was exploited at a recent wedding at the East-a table spread made entirely out of day flowers. It was a lunch given by the hostess to the ten bridesmaids who had accompanied the youthful bride to the altar. The whole surface of the square table was of about eight inches from point to point, crossing and recrossing to form an exact square, leaving a border about fourteen inches clear for the plates, glasses, etc. vine at regular intervals with minute safety pins to one side of the cloth, and care-Iully keeping true diagonal lines to the opposite side, after the manner of an old latticed window. Through it marguerites, full strewn, so placed as to raise their heads clearly and having the most starry, youthful look of gayety, such as flowers have in a meadow, and yet a dainty air which was well suited to the young guests. Daylight had been excluded, as the situation of the room gave no real sunshine; candles and shades, small branches of the arparagus winding partly up the standard.

No bonbon dishes or any sort of food broke the delicate lines of green and white which, though in mixed form, varied with every flower and bud. In the center a very tall, clear glass vase held a graceful bunch of long-stemmed marguerites, and from it long fern branches trailed downward to the cloth. At the plates were the boxes containing the bride's gifts to her maidens, and a small bunch of violets was thrust through the narrow bow of white satin ribbon which tied them. One almost felt that the guests also should have been dressed in white, but their wintry furs and velvets only intensified the purity and delicacy of the white and green.

Though not a part of the decorations, it may be suggestive to add that before they rose from the table considerable interest and fun were derived from the choosing by each maid of a cake out of a dish holding exactly ten, iced precisely alike, and in one of which was concealed a ring. A single daisy made by the confectioner adorned taneously, so the interest was kept up to ring and wire together. She whose lot it was to find was supposed to be the next bride from the pretty group.

No club in Indianapolis has yet followed the recent idea of several of the clubs of other cities. This idea is called "reciprocity," and means that the good in some clubs shall occasionally go beyond the membership. One club has what it terms, "Children's day," when the children of the members are brought and are allowed to see what it is when "Mama goes to the club." If possible some work is given to the children, such as acting as ushers, a duty which they enjoy, as they feel the responsibility of doing something for grown-up people. Another club has "daughter's day," when the daughters of the members are invited. Another club leaves two or three dates on its programme not filled and a member of another club reads a paper, which she has read before her own club a few weeks before. This latter plan is said to "bring the presidents and committees together, comparison of methods result, acquaintance and sympathy are extended and a desire for excellence is stimulated."

As Washington's birthday is a good dayto celebrate there are various suggestions made for dinners, luncheons, receptions and teas. The following is for a Martha Washington luncheon and suggested by Mrs. S. T. Rorer in the Ladies' Home Journal:

Cover the table with a white cloth. In the center place a mirror, on which stand a tall vase filled with red and white carnations. At one corner place a huge bow of blue and white ribbon. In this bow stand a dainty dinner lamp of silver, glass, brass or copper. Have the light shielded by a fluffy scarlet paper shade. The almonds and olives in pretty glass dishes may also form a part of the table service. For this special occasion it would be well to use either plain white china or old Canton. In keeping with the title, a statuette of General or Lady Washington on a round bonbon box may be placed as a souvenir at the left of each plate at table.

Tomato Bouillon. Olives. Almonds, Salmon Creams. Sauce Hollandaise. Potato Balls. Chicken Alabama, Peas. Waldorf Salad. Violet Russe.

Coffee. The story is told of a North Side man, wife often asked him to answer the at home and the wife and maid both out, at her home on North Meridian street. The bell rang and he finally reluctantly went to the door; there stood four ladies. They asked if Mrs. -- were at home, and the husband answered that she was not. Each lady took out her visiting card and said, "Please give these to Mrs. --." The answer was rather unexpected. "No; I will tier and Mrs. H. H. At one of the recent dinners lilles of the valley were effectively used as the decorative flower. Ropes of the delicate waxen bloom wound in and out among the covers piece there was a large candelabrum, set n a mat of lilles, which hid its base, and from which went to the cover for each lady guest a broad white ribbon, silver across its length. In front of her plate the basket filled with lilies of the valley, which as she took it up on leaving the table, brought also the ribbon scarf. At this dinner the shades were white, with a cluster of the ribbon leaves of the dinner flower at one side. Single candlesticks also were used, set about the table.

One of the prettiest weddings of the week was that of Miss Lizzie Laubert, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Laubert, to Mr. Emil E. Fahrion, at St. Paul's German Evangelical Church, on Wednesday evening. The bride wore a handsome gown of white brocaded taffeta en traine, a vell enveloping her figure. She carried a bou quet of Bride roses, tied with white sati ribbon. Miss Anna Laubert, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. She wore a pretty gown of white silk and pink embroidered chiffon, and carried an arm bouquet of pink roses tied with pink satin ribbon. Mr. Charles Ferger was best man. A large reception followed the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Fahrion will receive their friends in their new home after March 1.

Mrs. John F. Carson gave a pretty valentine luncheon yesterday for her daughter Helen, whose twelfth birthday anniversar low, flat basket of Bridesmald roses in the ers at either end. A birthday cake, with twelve candles set in heart shape, was an important feature of the occasion. The name cards were of unique design, the outside being decorated in water colors and the inside with a pen and ink sketch in a heart-shape frame. They were made by a friend of Mrs. Carson, Miss Haven, of Newark, O. After the luncheon there was an informal dance. The guests included Misses Ruth Pratt, Eloise Lyman, Mabel Talbott, Suemma Vajen-Coleman, Anna May Yea ger, Addie Chenoweth, Guenn Clark, Vir-ginia Shaw, Elizabeth Baker, Grace Cavanagh, Helen Day, Jessie Gibson, Edith Wood, Margaret Husbands, Lillian Foor, Emily Winters, Florence Smith and Mary Carson.

Mrs. J. S. Anderson gave a handsome party to about 150 children last evening at her home on North Illinois street for Jo Stanley and Jamie Harold Anderson. The floors of the wide hall and three large connecting rooms were covered with canvas and the mantels were decorated with ferns and flowers. The staircase was entwined with Southern smilax. A feature of the decorations was a large valentine which occupied one corner of the parlor. It was made of lace and satin to represent a real valentine and decorated with yellow satin hearts and flowers. In the center was a diamond shaped opening in which stood the | 65c Half Flouncings ...... queen of hearts, personated by Miss Ada Moore. She wore a floral heart on her corsage and a floral arrow in her hair and gave handsome valentines as favors to the children. The large valentine was the design of Miss Louise Garrard. Mrs. Anderson was assisted by Miss Daisy Clark Miss Mera Tousey and her visitor, Miss Bugbee, of Minneapolis, Miss Harriet Eitel, Miss Annie Reaume, Miss Clara Roache of Kokomo, Miss Mary Reaume, Miss Anna F. Byram, Mr. and Mrs. Philip Hildebrand, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Reaume, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Barclay Walk-er, Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Schleicher, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Clark, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Mick and visitor, Mrs. Ferguson of Mat-toon, Ill, and Mr. and Mrs. J. Q. Van Winkle. All of the cakes and ces were in heart shape and the valentine idea was carried out in every detail. An orchestra

The following from the Rochester (N

Y.) Democrat and Chronicle shows how Miss Susan B. Anthony is appreciated in her own home. The reception mentioned will be given Monday evening in Power Hall, from 8 to 11 o'clock: "The reception will be purely of a social nature, in which suffrage, or nonsuffrage, or anti-suffrage, will have no part, but it is intended to be an expression of homage admiration and love, which all thinking men and women feel towards the woman who has devoted her whole life to the bet terment of humanity. For in working is felt Miss Anthony has benefited ma and woman alike. Her labors have bee as much for men as for women, since her great aim is to improve the standard of the homes, to make woman an intelligent companion, not a household drudge, with no share in the capital of the home. Many women who condemn suffrage, and Miss Anthony as its greatest exponent, do not stop to consider, it is claimed, that it is through her untiring efforts that they at present enjoy the advantage of property laws which gives them the right to dispose of their own as they will, without consulting their husbands, a privilege which even the husbands of this State do not possess. Many other laws directly working to woman's advantage may be traced to Miss Antheny, and it is for these things, if for no others, that the women who have the reception in hand hope that all women will bury any suffrage prejudice and do her the honor her long life service has earned her. A number of men's literary clubs have expressed a desire to pay their respects to Miss Anthony, and they have been cordially invited. Women are requested to

Davis, at their home on Broadway. The guests of honor were Mrs. Kramer, of Laporte; Mrs. Burnett Orr, of Attica; Mrs. Harry Martin, of Covington; Mrs. T. J Murray, of Butte, Mont., and Mrs. J. E. Pounds, and they received with Mrs. Gardner and Miss Davis in the parlor, where pink carnations and smilax formed the fraand graceful decorations. The ladies assisting were Mrs. M.
J. Davis, Mrs. A. J. Gardner,
Mrs. R. K. Syfers, Mrs. W. D. Cooper, Mrs.
Howard Cale, Miss Belle Ford, Mrs. J. Albert McKee and Mrs. L. W. Cooper. In the long second parlor bouillon was served from a table appointed in scarlet, with butterfly bows of ribbon, satin under the lace doylies and candles in harmony. The mantel shelf was filled with scarlet tulips and the columns of the mantel were tied with large bows of ribbon and long ends, nearly to the floor. Mrs. J. J. Williams, Mrs. J. F. Jewer, Mrs. Philip Goetz, Mrs. A. C. Kimberlin, Mrs. E. M. Campbell and Mrs. E. E. Perry alternated in presiding at the table, and the pretty cups were passed by Miss Hazel B. Davis and a number of her friends, including Misses Edna Williams, Rose Holmes, Emma Wasson, Martha Drapier and Louise Forsyth, of Harrodsburg, Ky. The dining room was in the royal colors of purple and gold. Violets flecked the curtains and formed a large heart on the table, where violet embroidered dovlies were spread. Candles of the two colors furnished the light, and wall vases, filled with violets and tied with yellow ribbons, and stem vases, fil.ed with daffedils and ferns, ornamented the buffet. The ladies presiding in the dining room were Mrs. laude Griffith, Mrs. Burton Parrott, Mrs. R. I. Eads, Mrs. O. G. Pfaff, Mrs. Frank Janes, Mrs. Samuel Watson, Miss Eliza Chambers, Miss Elizabeth Cooper and her visitor, Mrs. Woodfill, of Greensburg. A music box in the hall alcove, screened with palms and portieres of smilax looped with ibbons, furnished the music. A feature of the decoration was the gas shades, of tissue, which were decorated with cupids and hearts, the artistic work of Miss Weed. Valentines, tied with yellow or violet ribbons, were favors for all of the guests. Among those from out of town were Mrs. Hert, of Jeffersonville; Mrs. C. C. Curtis, of Noblesville; Miss Scoville, of Evansville Mrs. Hunt, of Columbus, O., who is visiting her sister Mrs. Shearer; Miss Ward, of Phlladelphia, visiting Mrs. J. R.
